Progress In Modern Athens The progress of the modern capital of Greece will not astonish American readers, but Athens in no way resembles New York or Chicago, nor is Greece America. Between the two countries there is no point of comparison whatsoever. The Americans, springing from and connected with a powerful European nation, began their career with all the advantages and few of the drawbacks of civilization. They had only to confront the physical obstacles to their possession of the extensive territories which attracted and rewarded their enlightened energy, and immigration accelerated the formation of a giorious common-wealth. The Greeks, emerging from ages of debasing serfdom, had no political or social or intellectual preparation for the work of regeneration. After having achieved by dint of desperate efforts the independence of a part only of their land and race they had to undergo a series of revolutions before settling down into an organized body politic. Moreover, the belief that the national unity is not yet complete, has tended, and long may tend, to retard the work of internal development Neither these considerations, nor the fact that the whole country was a scene of desolation at the close of the war of independence, must be lest sight of in forming a judgment as to the progress thus far effected -D Billelas in Century.

A woman worn and wearied by the dragging weaknesses peculiar to her sex, cannot be expected to find zest in any duty or amusement. Life is all one dead monotonous gloom to her. From the Surveyor General's annual report to the Governor, the following very apropos comments on Nevada are takan:

Nevada could produce and manufacture every article it consumes, with perhaps, the exception of tea and coffee, and is capable of supporting ten times its present population, but its wonderful mineral resources have in times past commanded attention to the exclusion of every other resource. Fortunes have so often been made in a few months or years in mining that public attention has centered in that direction, and a very small percentage of the people who came to Nevada did so with the intention of making it a permanent home. People came here to get rich, and, when fortune favored them, they retired to some of the great money conters of the world and carried with them the wealth, which, if invested in the development of the State whomes it came, would have made Nevada the pride of the Union of the department of ornithology in the Field Columbian museum, Chicago, gives an entry which he once saw in the register of the Brook House.

Blu Alliestors. At the end of a chapter on alligators in his book, "Hunting and Fishing in Florida," Mr. Charles B. Cory, oursays

In the old days, when transportation was more difficult than it is at present, the Breek House was about the end of civilization and was a 24 hours' trip by boat from Sacksonville. It was at that time a great resort for spertamen, who were attracted there by the fishing and shooting to be had in the vicinity. The old register, which extended back a great many years, contained some queer records, some of them of doubiful verscity. Among others, some one had written:

'March 19, 1872, killed a large alli-gator, the largest seen here this year.

The stomach contained a boot, a piece of pine wood, a fisherman's float and come emall figh Immediately beneath this record was another, evidently added by some wag:

"March 24, killed a much bigger alligator than the one mentioned above. The stomach contained a gold watch, $10,000 in government bonds and a cord of wood." On the next page, written in a neat, unobtrusive style, was inscribed the fol-lowing: "Shot the biggest alligator ever known in Florida. The stomach contained the remains of a steam launch, a lot of old railway iron and a quantity of melted ice, proving that it existed during the glacial epoch." Outside Decoration of French Houses. Ferdinand Mazas, in The Architectural Record, explains scalpture as applied to Paris houses. "Twenty years ago," Mr. Mazas says, "the external ornamentation of French houses was, in general of a very sober character." Today decoration is very much in fashion and prehaps not always discreet.

M. Paul Heneuz, having been in trusted with the erection of the new town hall at Les Lilas, a charming little place near Paris, conceived the idea of treating all the sculpture of the building with lilues. The capitals, the balcony, the friezes and the flower work placed above the dormer windows represent nothing but sprays, bunches leaves and petals of lilac. The brackets of the windows are also formed of flowers of the same spring shrub. As to the baluster of the grand staircase, it represents a trellis with branches of lilao climbing over it. Yet the architect has avoided monotony and has produced the most graceful variations upon this single theme adopted by him. We will also mention a house designed by M. Paul Heners. In this case all the sculpture has been inspired by the profession of the owner, who is a druggist. The frontals of the dermer windows of this house are ornamented with garlands of mallows and poppies. The friese is composed of renaissance motives, in the ornamentation of which other medicinal plants figure. Finally, on the first story there is an escutcheon that recalls the origin of the fortune of the owner, who is the disseminator of some kind of ointment or clixir.

A Welsh Rip. Every nation has a Rip Van Winkle of its own, but the Welsh story of Rip is unique. He is known as Taffy ap Sign. One morning Tauty heard a bird singing on a tree close by his path. Al lured by the melody, he sat down until the music ceased. When he arose, what was his surprise at observing that the tree under which he had taken seas had now become dead and withered. In the doorway of his home, which, to his amazement, had also enddenly grown older, he asked of a strange old man for his parents, whom he had left there, as he said, a few minutes before. Upon learning his name the old man said: "Alas, Taffy, I have often heard my grandfather, your father, speak of you, and it was said you were under the power of the fairies and would not be released until the last sap of that sycamore had dried up. Embraco mo, my dear uncle—for you are my uncle—em-brace your nephew." Welshmen do not always perceive the humor of this somewhat novel situation of a youth-for Taffy was still merely a boy-being hailed as uncle by a gentleman perhaps 40 years his senior. -- Lappincott's.

Skeletons With Thing, A discovery of wonderful interest to the followers of the Darwinian theory of evolution was made not long since near the little village of Simulon, Mexico, while workmen were preparing the ground of a new coffee plantation, This wonderful ethnological find consisted of hundreds of skeletons of what some believed to be a prehistoric neople of a very low order of intelligence. Each of the skeletons is provided with the bones of a long, thick caudal appendage, which in life turned up, like

One of the best known men about the Indianapolis Board of Trade is Carles F. Shepard, who for several years has been connected with the house of H. E. Kinney, grain broker. Mr. Shopard is a bluff, hearty, old gentleman of medium height, gray-headed and with a mustache like a French veterant. He is a man of very deedled views on all subjects and is especially orthodox in politics and medicine. Notwithstanding his firmness in his convictions and the vigor with mess in his convictions and the vigor with the he maintains them he is a man of many friends for manly men, even though sometimes obstinate in their opinions, have the force of character that win admiration and friendship.
